On February 20, 2031, during the * Mobile Application Worldcup * in Berlin, you presented a mobile application that you have developed.

Following your presentation, a business manager, Marion GAYMAN, contacted you. She asked you to develop a mobile application to manage the planning of her gyms.
She didn't tell you more and simply gave you her business card and asked you to contact her by email.

Marion GAYMAN is NOT a computer scientist.
You will have to ask her to specify what her needs are for this application.

Write the complete professional email that you would send to her to let her specify her needs.
It will contain the list of questions that you will ask your potential client to get for the basic information you need before starting the project.

These questions should be specific enough that their answers give you the information you need to understand the project.
